ADVANCED BUSINESS LAW FOR ACCOUNTANTS

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This advanced course seeks to equip the student with an in depth understanding of business law specifically as it relates to the legal issues that are encountered by certified public accountants. This course is designed to further the students' knowledge and understanding of the law in such areas as the Uniform Commercial Code, contracts, securities regulation, organizational structure and formation, ethics, the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, property and insurance, and other forms of government regulation of business.

RATIONALE

The purpose of this course is to expose the student to a select group of legal issues faced by the typical accounting professional in today's business environment. This course is not designed to substitute for a law degree or for the advice of an attorney. Rather, this course should assist the student in identifying the legal issues associated with business operations and to impart to the student the legal knowledge necessary to recognize legal pitfalls. The student should then be able to respond by seeking legal counsel by going beyond the initial understanding of business law gained in an undergraduate course to focus on more advanced studies in those areas that are especially relevant to an accounting professional.
